PLATINUM AWARD
Program Year 2014-2015
CONGRATULATIONS!!

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Hafa Adai AGA members!

I would like to welcome everyone to the Association of Government Accountants (AGA) Guam Chapter Program Year 2015 – 2016! This year is expected to be an exciting year as the Guam Chapter will be celebrating its 45th Anniversary as a chapter of the AGA! The decades of service by you, our members, have propelled our chapter to the highest levels of the national association, having received the Platinum Award for numerous years through the AGA National's Chapter Recognition Program.

These achievements and accomplishments would not have been possible without the dedication and commitment from our members, namely the Chapter Executive Committees (CECs) that have served the Guam Chapter over the decades. It is because of these individuals, these Guam Chapter members that our chapter has succeeded in its goals as it has continued to do each and every year.

A special thank you and congratulations to Immediate-Past-President Rachel Field and the outgoing CEC for Program Year 2014 – 2015 for achieving the Platinum Award at the 2015 AGA Professional Development Training in Nashville, Tennessee this month as well as to the Certification Chair, Jojo Guevara for receiving the national Chapter CGFM Award.

Additionally, I would like to express my appreciation to our President-elect, Yuka Hechanova, our Secretary, Clariza Roque, our Treasurer, Josephine Villanueva as well as the CEC for this program year, for accepting or continuing the challenge and opportunity to serve the Guam Chapter.

In celebration of our 45th Anniversary, the Guam Chapter has exciting events planned for this year. Our Program and Awards Chair, Vincent Duenas continues to plan for the GovGuam 40 and Under: Emerging Leaders in the Government of Guam publication. Our Early Careers Committee Chair and Co-Chairs, Doreen Crisostomo, Zeny Asuncion-Nace, and Lorbea Palaming will be planning the 3rd Annual High School Essay Competition. Jojo Guevara, our Certification Chair will continue his award-winning CGFM program including the celebration of CGFM Month. The CEC also has plans to celebrate our history through an appreciation luncheon for the Guam Chapter's Past Presidents.

This month, we will be recognizing and celebrating the accomplishments of the 14th Annual AGA ACCOUNTABILITY 5K Sponsors and Volunteers. It is with their continued commitment to the Guam Chapter and their service that we have and continue to meet our goals of funding the Herminia Dierking and AGA Guam Chapter Scholarships for University of Guam and Guam Community College students.

I am hopeful that you are as excited as I am about this program year and I am very much looking forward to seeing each and every one of you at our monthly General Membership meeting luncheons! Senseramente,

Artemio “Ricky” Hernandez
President

PCAOB Sanctions 7 Audit Firms and Individuals

Washington, D.C. (July 23, 2015)

By Michael Cohn

The Public Company Accounting Oversight Board has disciplined seven audit firms and seven auditors who worked at the firms for violations of the Engagement Quality Review standard and other requirements.

In five of the seven cases, the firms permitted their clients to use their audit reports without having an engagement quality reviewer provide a concurring approval of issuance of the report, according to the PCAOB. Two of the seven firms and two individuals associated with them violated the "cooling off" provision of Auditing Standard No. 7, which provides that the engagement quality reviewer cannot be an individual who served as the engagement partner on either of the two preceding audits for that issuer. In these two cases, the individual served as engagement quality reviewer immediately following an audit in which the individual had served as engagement partner.

In some cases, the auditors engaged in multiple violations of the engagement quality review standard, according to the PCAOB. Some of the auditors also violated other requirements. For example, in one case an individual served as lead partner on an audit for six consecutive years, in violation of independence requirements limiting such service to five consecutive years.

"PCAOB rules require engagement quality reviews, which serve as important safeguards against erroneous or insufficiently supported audit opinions," said PCAOB Chairman James R. Doty in a statement. "Investors rightly expect the PCAOB to hold accountable auditors who fail to adhere to these requirements."

The firms and individuals who consented to the PCAOB's orders and the disciplinary actions for each included:

- Keith K. Zhen, CPA, of Brooklyn, N.Y., whose firm paid a $15,000 civil money penalty and was subject to censure and a two-year revocation of its registration with the PCAOB. Zhen himself was also censured and barred from being an associated person for two years.

- Bravos & Associates CPAs of Bloomington, Ill., paid a $10,000 civil money penalty, was censured, and its PCAOB registration was revoked for one year. Bravos himself was censured and barred from being an associated person for one year.

- R.R. Hawkins & Associates of Los Angeles, Calif., was censured and had its PCAOB registration revoked for one year. R. Richard Hawkins, II was also censured and barred from being an associated person for one year.

- Timothy Alan Coons, CPA, of La Jolla, Calif., paid a $7,500 civil money penalty, was censured, and agreed to undertake significant remedial measures designed to prevent future violations of AS No. 7.

- HDSG & Associates of New Delhi, India, paid a $5,000 civil money penalty, was censured, and agreed to undertake significant remedial measures designed to prevent future violations of AS No. 7. One of the firm's auditors, Anil Bedi, was also censured.

- Cowan, Guteski & Co., P.A., of Tinton Falls, N.J., was censured, as was one of its auditors, William Meyler, CPA.

- Weaver and Tidwell of Fort Worth, Texas, was censured, as was one of its auditors, Dale Jensen, CPA.

The settling firms and individuals neither admitted nor denied the findings. In determining appropriate sanctions in these cases, the PCAOB considered, among other factors, the settling firms' and individuals' willingness to resolve these matters early in the investigative process.

"Today's settlements underscore the importance of performing engagement quality reviews in order to maintain audit quality," said PCAOB director of enforcement and investigations Claudius B. Modesti. "This requirement must be taken seriously by auditors."

IRS Scales Back to Absorb Funding Cuts

Washington, D.C. (July 24, 2015)

By Michael Cohn

The Internal Revenue Service has been scaling back its activities and using some of its budgeting flexibility to absorb funding cuts, according to a new government report.

The report, from the Government Accountability Office, pointed out that the IRS's budget shrunk from $12.1 billion in fiscal year 2010 to $11.3 billion in fiscal year 2014, a reduction of approximately 7 percent. The IRS's budget declined by an additional $346 million from fiscal year 2014 to fiscal year 2015.

The IRS used some of its budgeting flexibility to absorb the budget reductions by allocating user fee revenue, which made up 3.4 percent of its budget, or $416 million, in fiscal year 2014. In addition, to increase agency-wide coordination of budget decisions, IRS formed a new office and committee to inform budget formulation and execution decisions.

To absorb the budget cuts, the IRS's Human Capital Office, Office of Chief Counsel, and Small Business/Self-Employed Division each reduced their staff by 16 to 30 percent.

According to officials, they also prioritized legally required programs, such as tax litigation, and reduced some programs or services, such as limiting non-filer investigations, postponing software acquisitions, and delaying approximately 24,000 employee background reinvestigations.

Such scaled back activities potentially reduce program effectiveness or increase risk to the IRS and the federal government, the GAO noted.

For fiscal year 2016, the Obama administration has requested $12.9 billion in appropriations for IRS. The request is almost $2 billion (18 percent) more than the IRS's fiscal year 2015 appropriation.

However, last month the House Appropriations Committee adopted a fiscal year 2016 budget proposal that would provide the IRS with a budget of $10.1 billion—$838 million less than the current level and $2.8 billion below the Obama administration's proposal (see House Committee Approves IRS Budget Cuts).

Declining Taxpayer Service

Last week, National Taxpayer Advocate Nina Olson released her mid-year report to Congress and pointed to dramatic decreases in taxpayer service by the IRS as the agency struggled to absorb the impact of the budget cuts (see Taxpayer Advocate Finds 300,000 Taxpayers Overpaid for Obamacare). The IRS answered only 37 percent of taxpayer calls routed to customer service representatives overall, and the hold time for taxpayers who got through averaged 23 minutes. This level of service represents a sharp drop-off from the 2014 filing season, when the IRS answered 71 percent of its calls and hold times averaged approximately 14 minutes.

The IRS also answered only 45 percent of calls from practitioners who called the IRS on the Practitioner Priority Service line, and hold times averaged 45 minutes. The agency also answered only 39 percent of calls from taxpayers seeking assistance from the Taxpayer Advocate Service on the National Taxpayer Advocate Toll-Free hotline, and hold times averaged 19 minutes.

The IRS answered only 17 percent of calls from taxpayers who called after being notified that their tax returns had been blocked by the Taxpayer Protection Program on suspicion of identity theft, and the hold times averaged about 28 minutes. In three consecutive weeks during the filing season, the IRS answered fewer than 10 percent of these calls.

The number of "courtesy disconnects" received by taxpayers calling the IRS skyrocketed from about 544,000 in 2014 to about 8.8 million this filing season, an increase of more than 1,500 percent. The term "courtesy disconnect" is used when the IRS essentially hangs up on a taxpayer because its switchboard is overloaded and cannot handle additional calls.

From the Tax Court Files: Is That Money a Gift or Income?

Julian Block Columnist
Jun 16th 2015

Our tax laws are usually spelled out precisely; it's real-life situations that don't always fall conveniently into place.

For instance, there's a mile-wide definition of income that entitles the IRS to share in "all income from whatever source derived," including payments that are "compensation for services." On the other hand, the term "income" doesn't include gifts.

As a result, the courts often have to resolve the troublesome question of whether a tax-free "gift" was actually a payment for services rendered. Not surprisingly, the question has come up when the IRS insisted on its share of sizable amounts received by women from men who weren't their husbands.

Consider the 1955 US Tax Court decision in the unusual case of Thelma Blevins, a divorcee from Louisville, Kentucky, who was a jill-of-all-trades and became the target of a painstaking IRS investigation. She didn't limit herself to supervising a staff of six engaged in the oldest of professions. Thelma occasionally filled in herself and staged unique shows for her guests.

Among other things, the tax collectors charged that Jim Mulhall enjoyed a close relationship with Thelma and that the money he gave her before and after her divorce should have been reported on her returns. Thelma and Jim explained to the court that these payments were gifts that had been made "in contemplation of marriage" and not compensation. The judge, however, accepted the IRS's version of what these payments were for; after all, they spanned a 12-year period and Jim made no attempt to separate from his wife during that time.

Another gift-or-income bout involved Margaret Brizendine, whose career tracked Thelma's. The way Margaret told it to the judge, she met a gentleman at a restaurant in Roanoke, Virginia, and became his friend. During the next five years, he provided her with a house, a fur coat, and a weekly allowance. Margaret thought these items were gifts because she received them in exchange "for her promise not to engage in prostitution and to grant him her companionship," whereas the judge thought it was stretching things to call them gifts. In fact, in its 1957 decision, the Tax Court took a damned-if-you-do-or-don't approach and said payments for vowing to abstain are just as taxable as payments for services rendered.

The IRS doesn't always have its way in these disputes. In 1966, an understanding Tax Court came to the rescue of Greta Starks. Her saga began in the pre-inflation 1950s when Greta, then in her 20s and employed occasionally as a Detroit fashion model, became involved in what the court discreetly described as a "very personal relationship" with a married gentleman in his 50s, who proceeded to spend a minimum of $65,000 on a shopping list that included a home, new car, jewelry, furs, and clothes from Saks Fifth Avenue.

In some way, the IRS discovered their arrangement. In addition to arguing that Greta should have paid income taxes on the $65,000, the agency tried to collect self-employment taxes (Social Security taxes on self-employment income) on the grounds that she had been engaged in a business venture. Greta testified that the items in question were gifts and was backed up by her friend's description of the payments as made "to insure her companionship and more or less a personal investment in my future." Though less than impressed with this testimony, the court decided that Greta hadn't performed services for pay and relieved her of any tax liability.

AGA Guam Chapter: Know Your Certified Government Financial Manager

TALING M.
TAITANO
CGFM, CPA

How did you get involved with AGA?

I was assigned to work in the consulting section at Deloitte and my manager was the AGA President. He encouraged me to participate in the organization to develop networks with those in government accounting. I became active with the CEC and have formed wonderful relationships over the years I have been a member.

Why did you decide to earn the CGFM Certification?

The AGA announced they were offering the CGFM certification intending it to be the premier certification for those with careers in government accounting. It seemed a good fit and I believe I made a good career move in obtaining the certification.

How has the CGFM enhanced your career?

The AGA has offered great training opportunities for CGFMs. We have been able to educate local leaders so they recognize the importance of a CGFM. This certification has enhanced my resume and added value to my participation on the GDOE team.

What's the most important issue today in government financial management?

An issue we are grappling with currently is incorporating the new OMB circular into our current practices. While the circular relaxes requirements in some areas, we are working with our Third Party Fiduciary Agent and USDOE to work through this update and incorporate it into our procedures.

What accomplishment are you most proud of in your career?

While at GDOE, we have implemented a new Financial Management System in record time. Additionally, for the first time in GDOE history, we have had clean opinions in both the compliance and financial audits in the last two years.

What advice would you give a new college graduate joining the field?

I would encourage graduates to take the CPA/CGFM tests just out of college while their courses are fresh in their minds. Working at a CPA firm, particularly on Guam, allows you to be exposed to how different entities operate; I would encourage graduates to explore that opportunity. I also strongly believe that working in different organizations broadens your outlook about how things can be done and makes you a valuable asset. But you also don't want to move from job to job too frequently as employers may feel that you are not a reliable candidate.

What is the best thing about AGA?

I really enjoy networking with others in my field. I have met and formed relationships with wonderful people that I would likely not have met if I did not belong to AGA.

Note from the Committee Chair:

The AGA Guam Chapter hosted its 14th Annual ACCOUNTABILITY 5K Run/Walk on Saturday, June 27, 2015 at the Chamorro Village in Hagatna.

The annual 5K Run/Walk is one of AGA Guam Chapter's largest fundraising event of the year where a majority of the proceeds are used to fund the Herminia Dierking Scholarship for University of Guam (UOG) students and the AGA Guam Chapter Scholarship for Guam Community College (GCC) students.

Through the generosity of the community-at-large, including the private sector, every year is a success. This year was no exception. We were able to raise enough funds to provide scholarships to UOG and GCC students.

This would not have happened without our generous sponsors and great volunteers!

Thank you for all your support and assistance.
